

Ned Smith Center for Nature and Art visits the Trinity Preschool

Emily Rosmus, Education Coordinator and Hunter Kauffman, Nature and Arts Educator from the Ned Smith Center for Nature and Art visited Trinity Preschool on Thursday, February 20. They shared new and exciting information about various wild animals and the children were able to feel the pelt of a beaver, skunk and raccoon. They also saw a stuffed Heron and the antlers of a white tail deer. The children took on the roles of these animals and experienced the difficulty each has in finding food and surviving in the wild.
