

Trinity Preschool Goes Virtual

Despite the Coronavirus, Trinity Preschool continues to serve students and families.

Lead teachers Jen Morris and Deb Donnelly have been in touch with students and making efforts to understand how Trinity Preschool can best serve their needs during this crisis.

On March 21 they released a Resource Guide sharing interesting educational materials to places of interest, as well as local community resources of interest.

Beginning on April 7 virtual classes begin focusing on specific topics and activities.

Descriptions:

Circle Time: This virtual classroom experience will consist of songs, dance, a discussion about the weather and the date and an interactive book reading.

Let's Get Physical! During this time online, students will have the opportunity to move around doing different exercises through yoga, stretching, imaginative play, and dance.

Planned Lesson: Each planned lesson will give the students a chance to do independent work prior to the lesson and will give them the opportunity to show their work, engage in a guided discussion, and complete an exercise that builds on what they've learned.

Individual Instruction: In 15 minute increments, students will have the opportunity to work one-on-one with a teacher to practice any skills that they may need to work on. This will also include students who may want extra time to simply talk about what's on their minds. An email will be sent out to sign up for a specific time that suits your needs. Please specify what your child would like to work on during this individual instruction time. There will be eight spots available each week.
